Continued from Page One much worthwhile or not. To paraphrase the Army saying, we sated the gray hairs not the man, it was felt in the community that anybody who hit 65 or 70, even though he remained as big a fool as ever, certainly deserved at least courtesy from the young. To grow old then was regarded as an chievement in itself-as it was, considering the rigors of life and the kind of medicines people dosed themselves with.

To be respectful to old men and women never was a sruggle with me. I always venerated them as a child and loved to listen to them by the hour. Although they may ot have been founts of wisdom hey certainly were the repositories of wonderful memories and strange tales of bygone times. To this day oldsters still hold the seme fascination for me. I tarrly find even the most garrulous of them boring. Old people, having known more of life, generally can converge more interestingly than young people, with the possible exception of very 'young But the sad paradox of our civilization is that while we are entering an old folks' boom in term of numbers, and our old people are healthier than the aged of previou time, we manage to make so many of them feel useless and unwanted. We chan many of them to the idle ness of a retirement they do no wan.
